React Native App Development

React Native App Development

Why do we use React ?

Sovereign, provides React Native app development services. It's based on React, Facebook's JavaScript library for building user interfaces, but instead of using it just for browser, it targets mobile platforms too. In other words, developers can write the code only once and make it work on multiple platforms. So how does it affect the user? Well at Sovereign we use React Native so the application we develop will be available on all platforms creating a wider reach

Advantages of React Native

Community

Developers can share their experiences and create portfolios, which encourages them to write better code. After learning something new while working with React Native, a developer can share their experience with the GitHub React Native Community, get feedback, and collaborate with other members.

Reusable code

This is probably the most important advantage of React Native. With the convenience of this framework, developers don't need to build a separate mobile app for each platform, as almost 90 percent of React Native code can be reused between iOS and Android. React Native is a perfect solution that can cut the time and cost in half.

Simplified UI

React Native is all about the mobile UI. If we compare this framework to AngularJS or MeteorJS, we find that it looks more like a JavaScript library than a framework. It's important to create a sequence of actions when building a mobile app, and React Native makes an implementing order just perfect. Plus, user interfaces designed in React Native are more responsive, less load time, and provide a smoother feel

Live and hot reloading

At Sovereign we use live reloading which reads and compiles a live file in which changes are made and then provides the new file to the simulator, which automatically reloads the app from the starting point. Hot-reloading is based on Hot Module Replacement (HMR)
